The screenshot displays a digital tabletop role-playing game interface. The central focus is a window titled "THE TIES THAT BIND" featuring a character portrait of a man in a hat and a woman in a long brown dress. To the left, a text window shows a GM's introduction: "The carved Autumn Leaves, swings quietly at anchor in the harbor of Cherr's Landing in the eastern Klavik Kingdom. In the great cobb, Carlyetta Weisleigh is seated at a desk, her clerk attending and passing documents to her with ink stained fingers. The halling priest examines the parchments, her eyes flickering to each of you in turn as she shuffles from page to page."

- GM: "The captain stands and speaks, 'I am not certain this little experiment will work. You are a strange collection of fellows, but the information I have here seems to indicate that are skilled, and some promise that you may one day realize great achievements."
- GM: "Setting the parchment aside, she continues, 'If you are ready then, let us see if the words on a page can be matched in deeds. At the inn of the Smoking Pipe speak to the barkeep Waldo Pennyfeather. Acting as my agent, he has assembled a load of indentures for servitude on the island of fair Picollo. The inn is located in the Picollan trade mission in the docks district. Escort the indentures safely back to the ship, and make haste, for we sail on the evening tide."
- GM: "I am sending the bosun with you. He can address any questions you may have on your arrival at the Smoking Pipe. Good luck."
